THE GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

HERE were many societies of veterans organized after the armies of the late war had been mustered out, embracing in their different memberships soldiers severed by circumstance of rank, of service or of association. Of all these organizations, the largest and the most comprehensive is the Grand Army of the Republic. No title nor military position must have been won to qualify a veteran to occupy a place in its honorable ranks. The Grand Army only asks if the applicant was a loyal soldier in the dark days when war threatened to disrupt our nation.

Neither color, political faith nor lack of social position bars the portals of the post. The General and the humblest member of his old command touch shoulders in the Grand Army as they could not on the battle fields of yore. Into its ranks may come the men whose freedom was won in battle, if only it was their privilege to wear the blue during those stirring days. Fraternal in association, charitable in scope, steadfast in determination, powerful in beneficent influence as it is far reaching in growth, the Grand Army is to-day the greatest organization of veteran soldiers in the world.

The Grand Army of the Republic had its remote origin while the war was yet in progress in the consultations of Reverend William J. Rutledge, Chaplain of the 14th Illinois Infantry, and Dr. B. F. Stephenson, Surgeon of the same regiment, during Sherman's expedition to Meridian, Mississippi, in February, 1864. After their army service was over, the plan of founding an organization of soldiers of the war was the subject of a correspondence between them which resulted in their meeting by appointment at Springfield, Illinois, in March, 1866, at which meeting much time was spent in arranging a ritual for the proposed organization.

Dr. Stephenson had previously consulted with many of his former comrades regarding the contemplated plan and had benefited by their advice, and besides the two gentlemen named, there were present at the conference at Springfield others who aided materially in perfecting the organization. Among them were: Colonel John M. Snyder, Colonel Edward Prince, Doctor James Hamilton, Captain John S. Phelps, Major Robert M. Woods, Major Robert Allen, Colonel Martin Flood, Colonel Daniel Grass, Captain John A. Lightfoot, Captain B. F. Smith, Major A. A. North, Captain Henry E. Howe and Lieutenant B. F. Hawkes.

These conferences finally resulted in a temporary organization of the Grand Army of the Republic. The name was chosen in the latter part of March, 1866.

On April 1st, Major Stephenson, acting as Commander of the Department of Illinois, by virtue of being the organizer of the association, issued his General Order No. 1, announcing his Department officers. On April 6th, the first post of the Grand Army was organized at Decatur, Illinois, its charter being signed by Major Stephenson as Department Commander. The constitution and ritual of the order were agreed upon and printed in May, 1866.

In the latter part of June, 1866, a call was issued for a meeting of Illinois soldiers and sailors, to be held in Springfield, on July 12, 1866, to perfect the organization of the Department of Illinois. At that time thirty-nine posts of the order had been chartered in Illinois. The call was signed by many influential men. The attendance at the convention was large and represented all branches of the service.

The following gentlemen were elected permanent officers of the Department of Illinois, at the convention of July 12th:

Department Commander, Major-General John M. Palmer.

Assistant Department Commander, Major-General John Cook.

Adjutant-General, General Jules C. Webber.

Quartermaster-General, Colonel John M. Snyder.

Assistant Adjutant-General, Captain John A. Lightfoot.

Council of Administration—General John McArthur, General T. F. Mather and General I. C. Pugh.

Upon being relieved of any direct official responsibility for the work of organization in Illinois by the election of General Palmer as Commander of that Department, Major Stephenson, acting as Commander-in-Chief of the order, turned his attention to promoting the growth of the organization in other States. The membership of the organization at that time is not known.

On October 31, 1866, Major Stephenson, acting as Commander-in-Chief, ordered a National Convention of the G. A. R. to be held at Indianapolis, on the 20th day of November, 1866, "for the purpose of perfecting the national organization, and the transaction of such other business as may come before the convention." In response to this call, the representatives of eleven Departments assembled in Morrison's Opera House, in the City of Indianapolis, on the day named, and held the first National Encampment of the G. A. R. Oliver P. Morton, the famous War Governor of Indiana, was received with the greatest enthusiasm when he arose to welcome the members of the Grand Army of the Republic to the city. The following officers were elected at that encampment:

Commander-in-Chief, S. A. Hurlbut, Illinois.

Adjutant-General, B. F. Stephenson, Illinois.

Quartermaster-General, August Willich, Ohio.

Surgeon-General, D. C. McNeil, Iowa.

Chaplain, William A. Pile, Missouri.

Council of Administration—J. K. Proudfit, Wisconsin; William Vandever, Iowa; T. O. Osborn, Illinois; T. C. Fletcher, Missouri; T. T. Taylor, Ohio; H. K. Milward, Kentucky; F. J. Bramhall, New York; Nathan Kimball, Indiana; Clayton McMichael Pennsylvania.

The first post of the G. A. R. in Indiana was mustered in July, 1866, at Indianapolis. One month later the Department of Indiana was organized and within a comparatively short space of time the number of posts in the Department had grown to 300. Notwithstanding the activity then shown, the Department made no reports and paid no dues to the national organization for several years. Later a re-organization was effected under Captain John B. Hager, and since that time the growth of the order in Indiana has been rapid. The present officers are as follows:

Department Commander, James T. Johnston.
Senior Vice-Department Commander, C. J. Murphy.
Junior Vice-Department Commander, W. F. Medske.
Department Medical Director, J. Y. Hitt.
Department Chaplain, O. S. Reed.
Assistant Adjutant-General, R. M. Smock.
Assistant Quartermaster-General, O. R. Weaver.
Department Inspector, Thomas M. Little.
Judge Advocate, J. H. Jordan.
Chief Mustering Officer, W. F. Daly.
Department Council of Administration—Benjamin Starr, Lucien A Foote, John W. Senior, H. H. Ragon, Ed. G. Booz.

This is the third time Indianapolis has had the honor of entertaining the National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic,—in 1866, in 1881, and now in 1893. In 1866 the delegates of eleven Departments numbered 228; in 1881, there were but 126, although they represented twenty-one Departments; now, in 1893, forty-five Departments send 1,227 representatives to transact the legislative business of the Order.

NATIONAL OFFICERS, G. A. R.

A. G. WEISSERT, the Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, was born August 7, 1844, at Canton, Stark county, Ohio. During his boyhood he removed with his parents to Wisconsin, where he was residing when the war broke out. He graduated first from the High School, Racine, Wis., and later, from the University of Michigan. After three efforts to enter the army, having been rejected on account of his age and stature, he was finally accepted, and early in September, 1861, became a member of Company K, Eighth Regiment, Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, the famous "Live Eagle Regiment."

When his first term of three years was about closing, the war not being over,

Comrade Weissert re-enlisted for three years more or "during the war." This re-enlistment occurred almost under the guns of Vicksburg. He remained with his regiment, which was always at the front, and participated in all its battles until the fight at Nashville, December 15, 1864, when he was wounded just above the left knee. This bullet has never been extracted and the wound never has healed, but requires dressing a number of times daily and causes him much suffering.

Convalescing sufficiently to rejoin his regiment, he did so on crutches. He refused to be discharged until his regiment was disbanded, and marched home with it late in September, 1865. After the close of the war, he was appointed Sergeant-Major of his regiment, and was afterwards brevetted "Captain, to date from the battle of Lake Chicot, Ark., June 6, 1864, for meritorious conduct in that fight and at the battle of Nashville, December 15, 1864, and for extraordinary bravery throughout the Red River Expedition." He was also appointed to a cadetship at West Point Military Academy, but was obliged to refuse it on account of wounds received in battle.

In 1866, soon after the Grand Army of the Republic was organized, he became a member of the post at Madison, Wis., of which Generals Fairchild, Rusk and others were members. He frequently represented his post and Department at Department and National Encampments; he was twice elected Department Commander of Wisconsin the last time by acclamation to succeed himself; he was also President of the Executive Council of the Citizen's Committee that had in charge the preparations for the 23d National Encampment at Milwaukee.

At its session in 1889 the National Encampment unanimously elected Comrade Weissert Senior Vice-Commander-in-Chief of the G. A. R., and in that capacity he visited many Departments with Commander-in-Chief Alger. At the Detroit Encampment in 1891 he received the second highest number of votes for Commander-in-Chief.

At the Washington Encampment, in September, 1892, he was elected Commander-in-Chief by acclamation, and immediately after the adjournment of the Encampment he began a tour of visitations to the Departments, and has visited nearly all of them—several two or three times. Especial attention has been given to the Southern Departments, some of them never having had a visit from the head of the order. The increased membership, discipline and harmony throughout the Grand Army indicate that the visitations have resulted in much good. He is a member of E. B. Walcott Post, Milwaukee, and may be found at his post at every meeting when at home.

A black and white portrait of Colonel Richard Henry Warfield. He is a middle-aged man with a full, dark beard and mustache. He is wearing a dark, high-collared military-style jacket over a light-colored shirt. The portrait is set against a plain, light-colored background.

COLONEL RICHARD HENRY WARFIELD, Senior Vice-Commander-in-Chief, enlisted as a private in the Fiftieth Regiment New York Volunteers (Engineers) at the breaking out of the war. In 1864 he was commissioned a Second Lieutenant, and one year later received his commission as a First Lieutenant. He served with his regiment until the close of the war, and with it marched in the grand review at Washington in 1865. After the war he engaged in mercantile pursuits until 1877, when he became cashier of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank at Healdsburg, California. About two years since, Colonel Warfield retired from active work in the bank, and last year assumed the position of landlord and manager of the Baldwin Hotel, San Francisco.

Colonel Warfield was elected Commander of the Department of California G. A. R., in 1885, at a time when the Department was much reduced. He took hold with great vigor and recruited in twelve months 10,045 comrades. As Commander of the Department, he went to the National Encampment at Portland, Maine, in 1885, and it was owing, in great part, to his efforts that San Francisco was chosen as the point for the National Encampment of the following year.

He was one of the original members of O'Rourke Post, No. 1, Department of New York, which is a leading and prosperous post in Rochester, N. Y. He was also a charter member of George H. Thomas Post, No. 4, Department of New York, and organized Rod Matheson Post, No. 16, Department of California. He has also filled the position of Junior Vice-Commander of California Commandery M. O. L. L. U. S.

CAPTAIN PETER B. AYARS, Junior Vice-Commander-in-Chief, is a resident of Wilmington, Delaware. He was born in Bridgeport, N. J., April 17, 1842. At the breaking out of the war he endeavored to enlist in a New Jersey regiment, but, the companies having been filled, he went to Philadelphia, and enlisted in the Thirty-second Pennsylvania Volunteers, subsequently the Ninety-ninth Regiment. He entered the service as a private, re-enlisted, and was promoted step by step to a captaincy, serving in the meantime as Adjutant of his regiment. He was in active service in the Army of the Potomac nearly the whole period of the war in the Second and Third Corps. He participated in fifty-two battles, and was wounded three times. At Sailor's Creek, three days before Lee's surrender, while in command of his regiment, he received a wound in his left arm that necessitated its amputation. Since the war, Captain Ayars has held several positions in connection with the postal and revenue departments of the government.

DR. WILLIAM C. WILE is a native of Pleasant Valley, New York, and the son of a Presbyterian minister, the Reverend Benjamin Franklyn Wile. The family came originally from Amsterdam. Dr. Wile, in his boyhood, was a student in the College Hill School, at Poughkeepsie, New York. In 1862, when only fifteen years of age, he entered the service, enlisting in Company G, of the One Hundred and Fiftieth New York Regiment. He was at the front for two years and eight months. Gettysburg was the first fight in which he was engaged. Later, he accompanied Sherman in his march to the sea. Returning home, he commenced the study of medicine under Dr. John H. Dwan, at Pleasant Valley, New York. He then spent a year in the medical department of the University of the City of New York. His taste for military affairs induced him, however, to enter the regular army, where he spent two years as hospital steward. He resumed his medical studies in 1870, and graduated in the medical department of the University of the City of New York. His first field of professional work was in New Brunswick, New Jersey; later, he was at Highland, Ulster county, N. Y., and at New Town, Connecticut; still later, he was called to the chair of nervous diseases and electric therapeutics, at the Medico Chirurgical College, in Philadelphia, where he spent a year. Owing to ill health, he returned to Connecticut, and settled down to practice at Danbury, where he has since resided. Dr. Wile organized the Danbury Medical Association, and has been an active member from the first. In 1881, he commenced the publication of the New England Medical Monthly, which he has made a very prosperous journal. He is also editor and founder of a medical journal called "The Prescription," devoted entirely to practical therapeutics. He has always played a prominent part in Grand Army circles.

REV. D. R. LOWELL, Chaplain-in-Chief, was born in Cherry Valley, New York, in 1846. At the time of the breaking out of the war he was a resident of Middlefield, and enlisted there in 1864 as a private in the One Hundred and Twenty-first New York. He was then eighteen years of age. His regiment formed part of the Sixth Corps, and most of the fighting in which he took part was done before Petersburg shortly before the close of the war. During a charge of his regiment on one of the forts lying before Petersburg, he led his comrades in the rush over the works and captured a Georgia Major who had been surprised by the suddenness of the assault. He was wounded at Sailor's Run during the pursuit of Lee by the Sixth Corps on April 6th, and as a result submitted to the amputation of his right arm. He lay in the hospital for eight weeks, but was finally discharged and was mustered out with his regiment.

After the war Comrade Lowell resumed his studies, graduating from Westford Literary Institute, and also from Wesleyan University, afterwards taking a course in the Boston Theological School. In 1874 he took charge of the Central Avenue M. E. Church of Boston, and since that time he has had many important charges. Dr. Lowell became a member of the Lew Benedict Post, No. 5, of Albany, N. Y., in 1874. He is now a member of Junction City Post, No. 132, Junction City, Kansas. He has twice served as Chaplain of the Department of Vermont, and has always taken great pleasure in all forms of Grand Army work, devoting much time and effort to lectures and speeches.

tion in 1864, while his former regiment helped to build the famous tree dam in Red River. After this his regiment, with others, was ordered to Mobile and participated in the capture of that city. Thence he went to the Rio Grande in June, 1865, and was kept at Brownsville until mustered out there, August 23, 1865.

Colonel Gray joined the Grand Army in 1867, and is a member of Joseph Bailey Post, 138, at Palmyra, Wisconsin. He served as Adjutant-General with Commander-in-Chief, Lucius Fairchild, who was elected at the National Encampment in 1886, and since the expiration of that year of service has been Assistant Adjutant-General of the Department of Wisconsin constantly until last March.

GENERAL LOUIS WAGNER, Quartermaster-General, was born in Giesson, Germany, August 4, 1838, and at the age of eleven came to this country, his father having been an active participant in the German revolution of 1849, and compelled to emigrate with his family. General Wagner received a common school education in the Philadelphia school. In July, 1861, he entered the army as First Lieutenant of Company D, Eighty-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and by well-earned promotions at various times became Colonel of that regiment, and later Brevet Brigadier-General. At the second battle of Bull Run, after participation in all the former engagements of the Army of the Potomac, he was wounded and taken prisoner. After his release he re-

COLONEL E. B. GRAY, Adjutant-General, was one of Wisconsin's first movers in defense of the country's flag. On April 19, 1861, he recruited Company C, of the Fourth Wisconsin Regiment, in the City of Sheboygan, was commissioned Captain of the company April 25th, and went with it into the service, remaining until April 10, 1862, when he was discharged for disability at Ship Island, Mississippi, and returned home. He recuperated his health, and on August 30, 1862, was commissioned Major and again went to the front with the Twenty-eighth Wisconsin. June 16, 1863, he was promoted to Lieutenant-Colonel, and was made Colonel of the regiment March 16, 1864. He was in the Vicksburg and Little Rock campaigns of 1863, and in the Red River expedition joined his regiment and took part in the battle of Chancellorsville. His wound having broken out again, he was sent home, and at Camp William Penn organized the colored troops; during the two years he was there in command he sent to the front more than fourteen thousand men. In 1865 he rejoined his regiment and commanded a brigade in the Fifth Corps. After being mustered out he came home, and has been part and parcel of Philadelphia's best interests ever since. To give a complete and detailed statement of General Wagner's public services would be to write a history of that city covering the past quarter of a century, so many have been the positions of trust and honor he has held.

Notwithstanding his many public duties, General Wagner has found time for other work connected with various organizations, fraternal, charitable and social. He organized the Grand Army of the Republic in Pennsylvania in 1867, and was its first Department Commander. In the national organization he was, in 1870, Junior Vice-Commander-in-Chief, and in 1871 and 1872 was second in command under General Burnside, and while that officer was abroad commanded in his stead. In 1880 he was elected Commander-in-Chief, and since that time has been actively engaged in Grand Army work.

JUDGE-ADVOCATE-GENERAL JAMES TANNER, widely known as "Corporal" Tanner, was born at Richmondvile, Schoharie county, N. Y., April 4, 1844. His early life was spent on a farm, and his educational privileges were those of the district school. After a few months' experience as a teacher, although not yet eighteen years of age, he enlisted as a private in Company C, Eighty-seventh New York Volunteers and was soon made corporal. He served in that capacity with his regiment through all the engagements in which it took part, until wounded at the second battle of Bull Run. In that fight a bursting shell completely severed his right leg at the ankle and shattered the left so badly as to make amputation necessary. Carried from the field he lost consciousness, and on recovering found that the surgeons had amputated both legs four inches below the knee. Meanwhile, the Union lines had been broken and the army was in full retreat. His comrades were forced to leave him at a farm-house, where the rebel forces, in close pursuit, made him a prisoner with the other wounded; paroled after ten days, he was taken to Fairfax Seminary Hospital, and after treatment there and recuperation at his old home in Schoharie county, he was able to walk about on artificial limbs. He then accepted a clerkship in the War Department under Secretary Stanton. On the night of President Lincoln's assassination he was employed to take notes of the first official evidence, and then stood by the bed of the dying President. In 1866 he returned to Schoharie county and studied law with Judge William C. Lamont.

In 1876 he was elected Commander of the Grand Army in the Department of New York. The magnificent Soldiers' Home at Bath, Steuben county, New York, where six hundred disabled veterans find the repose and comforts of a home, is the result of his labors.

When General Harrison took office as President there was great unanimity among the old soldiers in asking for Corporal Tanner's appointment as Commissioner of Pensions, and on the 26th of March, 1889, he was appointed, succeeding General John C. Black. On the 12th of September, 1889, after a little more than six months' incumbency of the office, he placed his resignation in the hands of the President and retired. Soon after he commenced business in Washington as a prosecutor of claims.

Connected with the Grand Army of the Republic since its early days, no man enjoys the esteem and confidence of his comrades in a greater degree than "Corporal" Tanner.

INSPECTOR-GENERAL, GEORGE L. GOODALE was born in Lowell, Massachusetts, March 7, 1844. Soon after he was eighteen years old he enlisted in the war of the rebellion, but the troops with which he started were not accepted by the Government, and he joined the Second Massachusetts Battalion. When a call for volunteers was made, the battalion became the nucleus for the Forty-third Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteers. He served his time with the regiment in the North Carolina Campaign of '62-'63, and, after his discharge, was tendered a Captain's commission in another regiment, but ill health compelled him to decline it. He returned to his old position in business, remaining until 1868, when he entered the employ of the manufacturing firm of Joseph Nickerson & Co.,

and twelve years later became a member of that firm. He is a member of S. C. Lawrence Post, No. 66, of Medford, Massachusetts. In 1873, he was made Junior Vice-Commander. In 1879, he was elected Commander, served for three consecutive terms, and declined an almost unanimous election for a fourth. He served on the personal staff of Commanders Hawes and Creasy, was Assistant Quartermaster-General on the staff of Commander Patch, and served two years on the Council of Administration. He has served as Senior Vice-Department Commander, and also commanded the Department of Massachusetts in 1889. He was Chairman of the Executive Committee having in charge the preparations for the National Encampment held in Boston in 1890, and to him is largely due the success which attended that Encampment. Comrade Goodale is and ever has been a firm friend of the Woman's Relief Corps, and was the first comrade who ever introduced into a Grand Army Encampment a resolution endorsing that organization. This was at the Encampment held in Lynn, Massachusetts, in 1880.

CAPTAIN J. L. BENNETT, Assistant Adjutant General on the staff of the Commander-in-Chief, was born in Manchester, Vermont, November 1, 1846. In 1855 his parents removed to Waukesha, Wisconsin, where Captain Bennett attended the public school. In February, 1862, he enlisted in Company H, Nineteenth Wisconsin, and served in that Company until October, 1864, when he was commissioned Second Lieutenant of Company D, Sixteenth Wisconsin. Shortly before his muster out in July, 1865, he was commissioned Captain of the company.

Captain Bennett's Grand Army service dates from 1875, when he joined Post No. 28, of Chicago, now U. S. Grant Post, to which he still belongs, and of which he served as Commander for one term. From 1881 to 1886 Captain Bennett was Assistant Adjutant-General of the Department of Illinois, and largely through his efforts the membership in that Department was raised from 2,300 to 22,000 during that time.

COLONEL DAVID S. BROWN, Chief Aide-de-Camp, was born in the city of New York, in April, 1839. His first military experience was under Noah L. Farnham, then a Lieutenant in the famous Seventh Regiment, National Guards, State of New York, who, before the war, formed a company of Zouaves composed of amateur gymnasts. It was to become a rival organization to Ellsworth's renowned Zouaves, and Lieutenant Farnham's purpose was to try conclusions with Ellsworth. The breaking out of the war, however, ended the rivalry, and brought Ellsworth and Farnham together, one as Colonel, and the other as Lieutenant-Colonel of the Fire Zouaves. Comrade Brown succeeded to the command of the little company which Farnham organized, and eventually took it into the Twenty-second Regiment, as Company B. Captain Brown served with the Twenty-second when it was called to the front in Virginia, taking part in active service with the regiment in 1863 and 1864, and was promoted to Lieutenant-Colonel. He was in the National Guard until he had rounded out eleven years of service, and is now a member of the Twenty-second Regiment Veteran Organization.

Twelve years ago Colonel Brown joined John A. Dix Post, No. 135, in which he held the offices of Officer of the Day and Senior Vice-Commander. In 1884, he organized James Monroe Post, No. 607, and was its Commander for five successive terms. He has been Aide-de-Camp on the staff of Past National Commanders Warner, Alger, Veasy and Palmer, and holds the same position on the staff of the present Commander-in-Chief, A. G. Weissert.

Colonel Brown is now serving his second term as Chairman of the New York Memorial Committee. He has devoted much time to Grand Army matters, and his zeal, activity and liberality in affairs which affect the interest of the order, have made him prominent and popular among his associates.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF NAVAL VETERANS.

THE National Association of Naval Veterans of the United States of America was organized January 13, 1887, and has increased its roll of local associations until they now number nearly thirty, located on the sea-coast, great lakes, in the West, Southwest and South. To become a member the applicant must have been an officer, seaman, landsman, fireman or marine. Any person who served in the United States Navy from 1861 to 1865, or who was in the revenue cutter service during that period, is eligible to membership. Ten shipmates can form an association, and upon payment of five dollars receive from the Rear Admiral commanding, a charter, set of rituals and service books. The association has a uniform and rank insignia not unlike that worn by the officers of the "Old Navy." It also has a national badge and a recognition lapel-button, and flies the Union Jack as its service colors. Its work is carried on much after the manner of the G. A. R., yet purely distinctive of naval routine and customs. At the Seventh Annual Convention, held at Baltimore, Md., September 15, 16 and 17, 1892, one hundred and twelve delegates were present. At that convention more than one thousand names were added to the national roster, which now contains the names and addresses of about nine thousand living naval veterans. The objects of the association are mutual benefit; the securing of a better recognition by Federal, State and municipal authorities; a higher elevation of old messmates; a cementing of the bonds of friendship that were formed more than a quarter of a century ago; and independent but concerted action of naval veterans throughout the country.

REAR ADMIRAL B. S. OSBON commanding the National Association of Naval Veterans, was born in the town of Rye, N. Y., August 16, 1830. His father was the late Reverend A. M. Osbon, D. D., of the New York Conference of the M. E. Church.

Admiral Osbon went to sea before he was ten years of age, and his first experience in warfare occurred while he was a lad, when his ship was attacked by a pirate junk in the China Sea. Soon after he entered the Chinese Navy and saw considerable hard service. He next entered the Argentine Navy under Commodore Coe, and became famous for his daring exploits. At the close of that war he returned to the merchant service, in which he remained until April 1861, when he joined the Harriet Lane, under the late Captain John Faunce, as aide and signal officer. Later on he joined the North Atlantic Squadron and took part in the brilliant naval engagements at Port Royal under Flag Officer S. F. Dupont. In January 1862, he was appointed clerk and fleet signal officer to the late Admiral Farragut. On entering the Mississippi the severe work of fleet signal officer devolved entirely upon him, and it is enough to say that the duties were performed to the entire satisfaction of the gallant old Admiral. His name is one of the four mentioned in Farragut's first report to the Navy Department, and the Admiral says that "Osbon was one of the most useful men on board the Hartford."

When New Orleans had been taken he was sent North on the gunboat Cayuga, as a bearer of dispatches, and he arrived in Hampton Roads in time to see the last attempt of the rebel ironclad Merrimac to annoy the Union fleet. For a part of that memorable day he acted as signal officer to President Lincoln. After a variety of special service Osbon was ordered to the Monitor Montauk as signal officer and aide to Commander John L. Worden, and participated in all the engagements before Fort McAllister, on the Ogeechee River, which resulted in the destruction of the rebel privateer Nashville. At the close of the civil war, General Jose M. Carvajal, in behalf of the Mexican Government, tendered him the supreme command of the Mexican navy, with the rank of Admiral, and as an inducement, issued to him a letter of marque giving him one-half of the prize money accruing from his captures and conferring upon him the power to issue letters of marque and commission ships under the Mexican flag. He accepted, and sailed from New York for Brazos with a full detachment of officers and men. He reached his destination in safety, but the steamer carrying his guns and torpedo outfit was lost off Hatteras, and as the prime object of the expedition was thwarted, he transferred his flag to the gunboat Chinaco at Matamoros, and confined his operations to the Rio Grande, aiding materially in driving the French from Mexico.

Admiral Osbon was one of the first Commanders of the Farragut Naval Association of Philadelphia, the oldest organization of the kind in the country, and was a charter member of the Naval Association of New York and also of the National Association of Naval Veterans. Besides being the Commander of Naval Post No. 516, he is chairman of the Associated Commanders and Quartermasters of the city of New York, and Colonel of the Osbon Marine Cadets, a large corps composed of Sunday-school boys. He has been in forty-nine naval engagements in his life and bears the scars of nine wounds.

The Indiana naval veterans were organized on January 16, 1893, under the title "Black Hawk Association of Naval Veterans of Indiana," with headquarters at Indianapolis. The officers are as follows:

Captain Commanding	JOHN B. WIRT, Indianapolis.
Lieutenant Commander	G. T. MENZIES, North Vernon.

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS,

AUXILIARY TO THE G. A. R.

THE Fifteenth Encampment, G. A. R., held in Indianapolis in 1881, passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That we approve of the project entertained of organizing a Woman's National Relief Corps.

"Resolved, That such Woman's Relief Corps may use, under such title, the words, Auxiliary to the G. A. R., by special endorsement of the National Encampment of the G. A. R., June 15, 1881."

Pursuant to an invitation from the Commander-in-Chief of the G. A. R., Paul Van Der Voort, which had been extended to all the various Ladies' Auxiliaries to the G. A. R. over the country, a meeting was held in Denver, Col., July 25 and 26, 1883, to perfect the organization of a national order that should embrace within its membership the loyal women of every State who were willing to unite in a fraternity whose object should be to assist the G. A. R. in all its work of charity, and in every possible way alleviate the distress or suffering of any needy veteran soldier or sailor of the war of the rebellion. This convention had twenty-eight votes and numbered fifty-one women, all told.

From this small number the membership has increased to about 150,000. They are the mothers, wives, daughters and sisters of Union soldiers, sailors and marines who aided in putting down the rebellion, and other loyal women whose object is to specially aid and assist the G. A. R. and to perpetuate the memory of the heroic dead; to assist needful Union veterans, their widows and orphans, and find them homes and employment; to emulate the deeds of army nurses and all other loyal women who rendered services to our country during the war of the rebellion, and to inculcate patriotism and true allegiance to the United States of America in the communities in which they live.

Condition of corps on March 30, 1893:

Members in good standing	107,199
Number of corps in organization	2,967
Expended in relief during last year	$96,914
Amount turned over to posts	33,288
Amount of relief fund on hand	74,376
Amount of general fund on hand	143,585

Total amount expended in relief since organization, $688,498 87

The National W. R. C. Home for the worthy women of the war, a handsome structure made possible by the legislature of the State of Ohio, is located on beautiful grounds at Madison, Ohio.

Margaret Ray Wickins, of Sabetha, Kansas, is now the National President.

The Department of Indiana, Woman's Relief Corps, was organized September 17, 1884, at Fort Wayne, Indiana, with seven charter corps. Of these, four are now in existence.

At the State convention in 1887, when Mrs. Flora Wulschner, the chairman of the Committee of W. R. C. and ladies of the G. A. R. of the Citizens Board of the 27th National Encampment, G. A. R., was elected Department President, the roster showed forty-eight corps. It was during the year of Mrs. Wulschner's administration that a new impetus was given to the Indiana W. R. C. There was a phenomenal increase of fifty-four corps and the total gain in membership was 1,740. The sum of $1,030.83 was expended in charity, and $392.28 was turned over to posts, making the total sum expended in relief $1,423.21.

The present number of corps is 180, with a membership of 6,428. Estimated sum expended in relief during the year 1892, $4,802.19. Of this $665.55 was expended for the Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home at Knightstown, Indiana.

Julia S. Conklin, of Westfield, is now the President of the Department of Indiana.

LADIES OF THE G. A. R.

THE national organization of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, was instituted November 18, 1886, in Chicago. Its members are the mothers, wives, sisters and daughters (who have attained the age of eighteen years) of honorably discharged soldiers, sailors and marines of the late rebellion, and ex-army nurses; also members of the G. A. R. as honorary members.

The name adopted is comprehensive, expressing the fact that all of the order are akin to and a part of the G. A. R. The organization is not auxiliary to any other. The objects are fraternity, charity and loyalty, in all senses of the words, toward the ex-soldiers of the late war, their widows and orphans.

Report made at Washington, September, 1892, showed :

Departments	13
Circles	300
Total membership	10,500
Expended in Relief	$5,450
In aiding G. A. R	3,000

They maintain, also, a Soldiers' Widows' Home in Pennsylvania, purchased at a cost of $10,000, to which they have added numerous improvements.

On account of the membership requirements, the growth is not so rapid as in orders which are not so exclusive. It has but three circles in Indiana—one at Logansport, with seventy-five members; one at New Albany, with sixty-five members; and one at Jeffersonville, with forty members. These societies spent during the past year about $200 in charitable work.

Carrie V. Sheriff is now National President.

THE CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS.

HERE was a time, before the coming of the railroad, when a city which had no communication with other points by water could hope for no great prosperity. The growth of the railway, however, wrought great changes in the commercial and industrial world, and showed possibilities undreamed of in the less active life of previous years. Regions that had been unbroken wilderness were opened to the settler, and villages became imbued with a new ambition and fast grew to be cities.

Such an one was the capital of Indiana. It had known only slow transportation by wagon as a means of export and import; even traffic by canal-boat had been denied it, and its citizens viewed its water-way rivals with an EARLY envy augmented by its very helplessness. The coming of the first OUTLOOK.

railway, however, changed all this, and the prosperity of Indianapolis dates from the day when the first locomotive steamed into the city. That early railway was followed by others, and the city soon became one of the most conspicuous western points. It began to be famous not only as the center of a great producing region, but as an important point for distribution as well, and from that time the future of Indianapolis has been assured. It is now a city of great commercial and industrial importance, with a prosperity based upon the development of many and varied industries; its railroads penetrate great forests of hard and soft wood, and reach mines of coal, extensive quarries of the finest stone, and beds of kaolin and clay; the agricultural region that lies around it is as rich as any in the world; petroleum and natural gas are found at its gates; more than this, almost all the great trunk lines of the country, east and west, and north and south, cross the State of which it is the capital, if they do not enter its Union Passenger Station. Indianapolis has known the trials of adversity, but to-day it is confident of a prosperous future.

The selection of the site of Indianapolis was the result of careful search and investigation by a board of commissioners appointed by the State legislature, in North Meridian Street.

1820, to choose a location for the capital of the State. In those days of few roads and bad ones, when travel was slow and difficult, the necessity of having the capital city in the central part of the State was imperative, but yet in all the districts in which the most eligible locations lay there was not even a village to which the honor might be given. This left the commissioners free to select what might seem to them the most available location. To them was given the power to say: Here shall be the future capital of the State of Indiana. The founding of a new city was placed in their charge and, hampered by no existing ties, they were free to choose the spot that would best suit the purpose in hand.

The site of their selection—which was afterward confirmed by the legislature—is upon the east bank of the west fork of White river, in almost the exact center of the State. The ground was level, drained by shallow ravines leading to the west and south-west, and its fertility was well shown by the beautiful forest trees and the heavy growth of underbrush upon it. The actual survey of the city was made in 1821, and one of the two surveyors who laid out the new capital was Alexander

South Meridian Street.

Ralston, who had, when a young man, assisted in laying out the City of Washington. It was well for the embryo town of Indianapolis that Ralston's services were secured, for he brought into the western wilds the best ideas developed in the plan of the nation's capital.

Following in a general way the plan of Washington City, four avenues were laid out radiating to the northeast, northwest, southeast and southwest from the outer corners of the four contiguous blocks lying in the heart of the new town. The scheme provided for a town covering one square mile, and comprising ten streets running due east and west, and the same number crossing them at right angles.

The avenues were to afford direct routes to the territory lying in the direction of their terminal points. Seldom have cities been planned with so much wisdom and forethought. There was no hap-hazard about the birth of Indianapolis, and the men who laid out the capital of Indiana in the then far west deserve more than a passing word of praise.

PLAN OF

The streets were all given a generous width. Washington, the main street of the town, was made one hundred and twenty feet wide, and the others varied from eighty to one hundred. In the early days the streets were unnumbered, but in a later year the numbering was done from Meridian street to the east on the one hand, and to the west on the other, and Washington street was chosen as the cross street from which the numbering should be done to the north and to the south. In this also the plan was a modification of that of the City of Washington. The names of the streets in the original plan, other than the two just mentioned, were the names of the States of the Union. The original boundaries of the city were North, South, East and West streets. In the exact center of the city a circular park was laid out in which it was intended to build a residence for the Governor of the State. This was afterward done and the park was known as the "Governor's Circle," but few of the executives of the State availed themselves of it. The Indiana State Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument now stands upon the site of the old house.

THE FIRST RAILWAY

In 1847 the Madison and Indianapolis railroad was completed to Indianapolis and opened for traffic. Until the coming of this first railway, Indianapolis was without connection with the outside world other than by wagon road. It produced little and consumed almost all that it produced. Some small trade was carried on with the neighboring towns, but the capital was isolated by reason of lack of means of transportation. Upon the completion of the railway, however, the business interests of the city underwent a change. Trade began to classify itself, and the ordinary village stores gave way to shops devoted to the exclusive sale of one class of goods. Business houses became larger and more numerous. The price of real estate advanced, a free school system was inaugurated, and a plan of street improvement was decided upon and undertaken. Railroad traffic increased, and, induced by it, other railroads were built. In 1852 eight railroads had extended their lines to the city, or were fast approaching it, and many business enterprises were undertaken on a large scale for so young a town.

The few following years rolled by quietly, but they brought increasing prosperity. Political excitement was rife and widespread, and all the indications began to point to a coming contest with slavery. The political campaign of 1860 was nowhere fought harder CAMPAIGN than on Hoosier soil, and no OF 1860. Northern city was in closer touch with the momentous events of Mr. Lincoln's administration than Indianapolis. The questions that confronted the country were as vital to this railroad center of the West as to many cities of greater population, and the discussion of them here was as earnest and heated. On the matter of war, public opinion was divided. The party which held that the first duty of the citizen was the preservation of the Union, was opposed by that which maintained a peaceable separation to be the better course. It did not lie, however, with the Northern States to choose between peace and war, and the news that the Confederacy had begun hostilities, welded the loyal North into a party a thousand times more strong than ever rallied about the standard of a political faith. On February 12, 1861, just two months before the Charleston batteries opened fire on Fort Sumter, while on his way to Washington to assume the duties of the Presidency, Mr. Lincoln made a five-minute speech at Indianapolis, in which he

for the first time intimated that he considered it his duty to protect and preserve the nation. His words, as those of the incoming administration, had the effect of harmonizing the differences between the Union men; old party ties dissolved, and the existing political factions began to base their faith upon friendship for or hostility to the Union.

But once in her history has Indianapolis witnessed such scenes as followed the announcement that Fort Sumter had been fired upon. All business was suspended, and upon every street throngs of men and women discussed the situation. The crowds were not boisterous; yet the intense strain was shown on every countenance. In the general discussion there was no thought of politics, party lines were disregarded in the great question the nation had been brought to face.

As the day passed the excitement increased. About the newspaper and telegraph offices dense masses of humanity crowded the streets. That night two mass meetings of citizens were held, there being no one building large enough to accommodate the crowd, and through them both seethed a tense interest and keen excitement such as Indianapolis probably will never know again. At half past nine o'clock word came that Major Anderson had surrendered. On every hand the cry was "War." Sober, calm citizens whose every wish had been that the threatened strife might be avoided, now saw that but one course could save the country.

Soon after learning of the attack, Governor Morton telegraphed President Lincoln, offering him, on behalf of the State of Indiana, ten thousand men. He then turned his attention to the organization of his staff. This was effected before President Lincoln issued his proclamation calling for 75,000 men, which was received on Monday. Indiana's quota under this call the city became a vast camp. The military outlook was the sole topic of conversation, and throughout the city the only business transacted was that which related to the war and war equipment. The enthusiasm pervaded all classes, and old and young became inspired with military ardor. The desire to enlist seemed to possess every one. One day after President Lincoln's call for troops was issued, five hundred men were in camp. On the evening of the day following fifteen hundred recruits were there. One day later there were two thousand five hundred in camp, and troops were pouring into the city by every train. In less than a week Governor Morton had been offered three times Indiana's quota under the President's call. The military spirit was so strong that men begged as a favor to be accepted.

During the whole of the war Indianapolis was prominent in the military operations at the West as a halting and recruiting point for troops passing to and from the front, as well as the center of the organization and equipment of Indiana troops.

From this point more than two hundred thousand Indiana soldiers were sent to the South. From the day when Sumter was fired upon until the last echo of the strife had died away, the streets of Indianapolis were alive with marching men, while the roll of drums, the blare of bugles, and the sound of martial bands were heard almost incessantly. The first camp, afterward called Camp Sullivan, was in what is now Military Park. Soon after a second camp was opened in the new fair grounds, lying between what are now Talbott and Central avenues on the west and east, and Exposition avenue and Fourteenth street on the south and north. It covered thirty-five acres. On February 22, 1862 the prisoners captured at Fort Donaldson and at Fort Henry were taken there for confinement, and Camp Morton became one of the great prison camps of the North. The first body of prisoners confined in it numbered thirty-seven hundred, and their quarters, food and bedding were precisely what had been furnished to the Federal troops who occupied the camp before them. During the following August an exchange of all the prisoners at Camp Morton was effected, and the prison was closed as such, but was occupied by Federal troops as a barrack. In the year following it was again opened as a prison, and until the close of the war was in charge of the federal government, the number of prisoners in confinement varying from three to five thousand. This was the prison camp in which Dr. John A. Wyeth was confined from 1864 to 1865, and against the management of which he has made grave charges.

The expenses of the war left Indianapolis deeply in debt, but because of the great prosperity of the city heavy taxation was borne without grumbling and the debt was rapidly paid off. The flourishing condition of the city caused a demand for municipal improvement, and in the five years following the war the city made great strides in development and prosperity. The vast numbers of troops quartered for a greater or less time in Indianapolis aided materially in promoting the city's growth. The population grew one hundred and thirty per cent. during the war, and what was at the outbreak hardly more than a flourishing village, became a city of importance in the commercial and manufacturing world by the time peace was restored. Every one was possessed by a spirit of enterprise and during those years plans were carried out that had theretofore been almost undreamed of. Though the end of the war caused a cessation of much of this energy, the impulse acquired was not lost, but on the other hand imparted a spirit of speculation to the city that led to disastrous results during the panic of 1873.

The citizens became imbued with a fever of enterprise. No undertaking seemed too great to be attempted. The fame of its prosperity had gone abroad, capital flowed into it from all directions seeking investment, and speculative excitement has never been greater than in Indianapolis during the years of 1870 and 1871. The panic of 1873 brought on a collapse, and the city paid the penalty of too eager and too reckless business management. It was long in outliving the result;

THE CITY TO-DAY.

for fifteen years it struggled with adverse fate, and then a new day began to dawn. Again foreign capital began to seek investment in its enterprises, and its citizens felt a renewed confidence in its future. The discovery of natural gas gave it fresh hope and attracted to it the attention of the manufacturing world. Then the granting of a new city charter, and the adoption of a comprehensive system of street and municipal improvement gave fresh cause for encouragement, and Indianapolis to-day, mindful of the severe lessons of the past and confident of the future, knows that its brightest days are yet to come.

BUILDINGS AND INSTITUTIONS.

THE FINEST of the public buildings in Indianapolis is the Capitol. It stands in a tract of nine acres of ground, lying between Washington and Ohio streets on the south and north, and Tennessee and Mississippi streets on the east and west. The structure is of the order of Corinthian architecture, and is built of Indiana oolitic limestone of a warm gray tint. The memorial ornamentation, which is a distinguishing feature of the design, is such as is suggested by the early history of Indiana. The principal front is upon Tennessee street, and the portico of this entrance is reached by a flight of stone steps sixty feet in width. The pediment of the portico is supported by polished fluted columns with carved capitals, the tympanum being ornamented with the State coat of arms. The dome is a distinguishing feature of the structure, and is constructed in accordance with the designs of the best architectural examples extant. The main corridor, sixty-eight feet in width and extending the length of the structure, is paved and wainscoted in marble and smoothly polished oolitic stone. It is lighted by large skylights in the roof. Four large stairways and ample elevator service afford access to the second and third floors. The business departments of the State are upon the first floor.

Tomlinson Hall.

The interior of the Capitol is simple and massive, yet exceedingly handsome. The main corridors are set at regular intervals with polished marble columns on granite bases, forming one of the finest colonnades in the country.

All modern improvements are in use in the interior arrangements. The legislative halls and principal rooms are lighted direct from the outside, roof and ceiling light being carefully avoided. The ceilings of the Senate Chamber, Hall of Representatives, State Library and Supreme Court room are constructed with panel work, such ornamentation being introduced as best harmonizes with the decorations of the side walls and furniture. The east and west fronts are 492 feet in length and 100 feet in height; the south and north 185 feet in length and 92 feet in height. The dome, to top of lantern, is 234 feet in height. The entire cost of the structure was about $2,000,000.

West Washington Street.

The Marion county Court House, after the Capitol, is the most striking public building in Indianapolis. Like the Capitol, it is built of Indiana oolitic stone. The building is massive in size, but owing to the effect of certain features of its design, the effect is not heavy. The style is renaissance. A large tower rises from the center of the southern front, and two smaller towers stand at the eastern and western flanks. The stairways are an especial feature of the interior. The building is 276 feet in length, by 106 in width, and cost about $1,600,000.

The Union Passenger Station stands at the intersection of Illinois street and the Union Railway tracks, three blocks south of Washington street. The building is of granite and pressed brick, and is one of the handsomest buildings in the city. The main waiting room is especially striking in design. Its arched roof is, at the center, sixty-five feet above the floor. The side elevation is broken at a little more than half its perpendicular height by a gallery which affords connection between the offices on the second floor. The first floor is given over to rooms devoted to purely depot uses, waiting-rooms, smoking-rooms, parcel-rooms, lunch-rooms, offices, etc. The train shed lies south of and is connected with the station building. It is 800 feet long and 350 feet wide. The cost of the structure was about $1,000,000.

Tomlinson Hall is at the corner of Delaware and Market streets, and faces the Court House. It is named for a former resident of Indianapolis, who, at his death, left an estate of $150,000 in trust to the city for the purpose
 TOMLINSON of erecting
 HALL. a city hall.

The city added an amount equal to the bequest and erected the present building. It has seating capacity for 5,000 persons. A large gallery runs around three sides, and a stage is at the north end. The ceiling, fifty feet in height, is finished in natural wood; its great size is broken at intervals throughout its length and breath by cross-beams. The acoustic properties of the hall are most excellent, and it is often used for concerts and music festivals, as well as for conventions, mass meetings and other assemblies. The business sessions of the G. A. R. Encampment, as well as several receptions to be given during Encampment week, will be held here.

The Public Library Building is at the corner of Meridian and Ohio streets. Its architecture is strictly Grecian. It is not only pure in architectural LIBRARY design, but it is also well adapted to its purpose. The library now BUILDING contains about 70,000 volumes. The other public libraries of the city are the State Library, the County Library, the Township Library and the Supreme Court Law Library.

The Indiana Central Hospital for the Insane is situated just beyond the western border of the city. The buildings cover about twenty acres, and are surrounded by 140 acres of rolling woodland. The department for men and that for women occupy separate buildings. The department for women is one of the best examples of the Kirkbride or Echelon plan of hospitals for the insane, and in the matters of heating, lighting, ventilation and fire protection, it is unsurpassed in the United States. All the wards are comfortably furnished, and are adorned with flowers and pictures. In many of the wards there are pianos. The number of patients is at present about 1,500. The cost of the hospital, aside from equipments, was about $1,600,000.

The Indiana Institute for the Education of the Blind, occupies eight acres of ground lying between Meridian and Pennsylvania and North and St. Clair streets. The grounds are the most beautiful in the city. The main building was erected in 1852, but several additions have been added in recent years. The average attendance is one hundred and fifty pupils, ranging in age from six to twenty-one years. All the common school and most of the high school branches are taught by methods adapted to the blind, and much attention is given to vocal and instrumental music. The older pupils are taught various trades. This institution holds a high rank among similar establishments in this country and Europe. It is about fifty years old.

The Indiana Institute for the Education of the Deaf, like the Institution for the Blind, is of that stately style of architecture so popular fifty years ago. Broad a bakery and other buildings. In addition to education in the sign language, pupils are taught to use their voices, and also to read the lips of persons speaking. The institution is at the corner of Washington and State streets.

The building of the Commercial Club of Indianapolis is the best modern office building in the city. It stands upon the west side of Meridian street, one-half block south of Washington, and was erected with a fund created by the sale of the non-interest bearing stock of the club. It has a frontage of forty-four and one-half feet and a depth of one hundred and twenty feet, and is eight stories in height. The two lower stories are Indiana oolitic limestone in the rough; the remaining six stories are of the same stone dressed. The interior is well arranged and richly furnished. The seventh floor is devoted to the uses of the Commercial Club, and comprises an assembly room, reading room, billiard room, two dining-rooms and such other rooms as are needed for club purposes. The Commercial Club represents the younger and more energetic element of the city's business interests and stands for progressive ideas in all municipal affairs. Its membership of about 1,000 includes all professions and classes. The headquarters of the Citizens' Executive Board of the 27th National Encampment G. A. R. is located in this building. The value of the building is about $200,000.

As a result of a suggestion made by Mrs. May Wright Sewall at a meeting of a committee of the Indianapolis Woman's Club, a stock company was incorporated June 6, 1888, for the purpose of erecting and owing a building adapted to the uses of literary, artistic, musical and social clubs. PROPYLÆUM. The total amount of capital stock is $20,000, and the articles of association provided that it shall be acquired, purchased and held only by women. The building was dedicated January 27, 1891. It is in North street, between Meridian and

The front is built of Indiana oolitic limestone, Modern Romanesque in style. The building, with the exception of the Directors' Room, is finished throughout in oak. In the general design particular attention was paid to lighting, heating and ventilation. The first floor contains a large entrance hall, with a parlor, and a committee room on each side. Each of these parlors will seat 200 persons. The second floor contains an assembly room with a seating capacity of 600 persons, and four small rooms suitable for coat and cloak-rooms, and other purposes. The basement floor contains a dining-room, a kitchen, two suites of apartments for office purposes—these having their entrances from the street—and several rooms for general purposes. The cost of the building was $28,000. During the past year it has been used more than 400 times by thirty-six associations and clubs, and forty-six individual patrons. The occasions have been club meetings, art exhibitions, musicales, lectures, dramatic entertainments, school commencements, concerts, receptions, banquets, balls and other social functions. The Propylæum is not only a great convenience to the city, but an excellent financial investment.

Indianapolis has more than one hundred church buildings. One of the strongest denominations is the Methodist Episcopal. Roberts Park M. E. Church, in which the sessions of the 11th National Convention of the Woman's Relief Corps will be held, is situated at the corner of Delaware and Vermont streets.

ROBERTS The building is of stone from the Ellettsville, Indiana, quarries PARK M. E. and stands on a lot one quarter of a block in extent. The archiesque, but in general treatment it is a modern composite. The building is one hundred and twenty-three feet in depth with a front of sixty-eight feet, to be flanked by a tower twenty-one feet square on the southwest corner and a spire on the northeast. The upper parts of the tower and the spire are not yet built, but will be constructed of the same stone as that of the remainder of the building.

The basement story contains the Sunday-school and class-rooms. The auditorium, on the principal floor, is sixty-two by eighty-four feet and thirty-four feet high, with large galleries, and will seat about 1,500 people.

National Convention of the Ladies of the G. A. R. is upon the east BUILDING. It is of Indiana stone, rough cut. The entrance is through a massive arch, beyond which a stairway leads to the floor above. The building contains an audience room, reading room, offices, amusement rooms, class rooms, parlors and a gymnasium. The membership is about 1,200, and the building is well patronized. The association is out of debt and its property is worth about $100,000.

The two largest hospitals of the city are the City Hospital and St. Vincent's.

The former is located in the northwestern part of the city; the lat-HOSPITALS. ter at the corner of Delaware and South streets. The one is maintained by the city; the other is a charity of the Roman Catholic church. A patient of any sect, however, is received at either.

Indianapolis is a city of many clubs. The Columbia Club is the most prominent social organization, and although only five years old, owns property worth about $50,000. The membership is limited to Republicans. Its club house is upon the northeast side of Monument Place, and is the headquarters of the Indiana Commandery of the Loyal Legion during the Twenty-seventh National Encampment of the G. A. R. Among the other clubs are the Indianapolis, Century, Women's, Katherine Merrill, Fortnightly, Hendricks Americus and Gray.

CLUBS.

The school system of Indianapolis is complete and perfect in every particular. Dr. J. M. Rice, in one of his recent articles in the Foram, pronounces the schools of Indianapolis to be among the very best he found in thirty-six of the large cities of the country. The system comprises thirty-two school and two high school buildings. Indianapolis also has a number of private schools of excellent grade and large size.

INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT.

(By Permission.)

MONUMENTS, STATUES AND PARKS.

AT THE Annual Encampment of the Indiana Department of the G. A. R., in 1884, a movement looking toward the erection of a State Soldiers' Monument was given tangible shape by the adoption of articles of incorporation, and the appointment of a Monument Committee of five members. This committee labored earnestly in the interest of the monument, and collected subscriptions aggregating about $22,000.

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

The actual construction of the Indiana State Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, as now erected, was authorized by an Act of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, passed at the session of 1887. This act appropriated the sum of $200,000 to defray the cost of erection, and empowered certain of the State officers to appoint five commissioners, who should have charge of the work. In addition to the amount appropriated by the Legislature, the sum raised by the Monument Committee of the G. A. R. was paid over to the commissioners, to be expended by them. In 1891, the State Legislature made a further appropriation of $100,000 to aid in the construction.

In response to the advertisements of the Monument Commissioners, some seventy designs of monuments and memorial halls were submitted to them, and from the number the commission chose that prepared by Bruno Schmitz, of Berlin, Prussia, and Mr. Schmitz was selected to take charge of the erection of the monument as supervising architect. By appointment of the supervising architect, Mr. Frederick Baumann, of Chicago, was chosen as deputy architect.

The monument is situated in the exact center of the city as it was originally laid out, and is built of Indiana oolitic limestone of a grayish color. The park in which it stands has an area of three and twelve-hundredths acres, and lies at the intersection of Meridian and Market streets. It is surrounded by a circular street fifty feet in width between the curbs, and paved with asphalt. The grounds surrounding the monument are divided into four parks, ellipse in form, and the space between these parks is paved with artificial stone. There are four approaches to the monument from the surrounding street, the approaches on the north and south sides leading directly to the stairways by which the terrace surrounding the base of the pedestal shaft is reached. This terrace is 110 feet in diameter and 10 feet and 8 inches above the ground. It is enclosed by a heavy stone railing on the east and west sides. The diameter of the pedestal of the shaft at the terrace floor is 52 feet. At the height of 54 feet and 8 inches above the floor of the terrace, the diameter of the shaft is 34 feet and 6 inches. Thence the cornice projects until its greatest diameter is 39 feet and 6 inches. From this point the pedestal recedes to a diameter of twenty-five feet, when it becomes incorporated with the shaft. Ascending, the shaft recedes in diameter to 12 feet and 6 inches at the line of the capital, which is 18 feet and 2 inches in diameter, and is supported by eight eagles, each 7 feet in height, carved in stone. A balustrade of stone surrounds the edge of the platform of the capital. This platform is reached by an elevator and stairway from the base of the interior of the shaft. On the platform stands a turret, supporting a bronze globe 8 feet in diameter, upon which is the crowning statue "Indiana," 22 feet in height. The statue expresses the elation of victory. The sword held in the right hand with the point turned down, typifies the power of the army to which the victory is due; the young eagle upon the head is emblematic of the freedom resulting from that victory, and the torch, carried aloft in the left hand, is the light of civilization resulting from that victory and that freedom. The weight of the figure is sixteen thousand pounds, and it is the largest bronze figure ever raised to such a height. The figure is by George T. Brewster, of Cleveland, Ohio, and the casting was done by the American Bronze Co., of Chicago.

There will be three bronze astragals upon the shaft. The lower will be placed at the base of the shaft at its union with the pedestal and will represent the army by illustrating the carnage and horrors of battle. It will be modeled from the arms and equipments of the late war, and will measure 11 feet and 8 inches by 25 feet on each face of the shaft. The author of the astragal will be Nicolaus Geiger, of Berlin, Germany. At the lower line of this astragal, at the point where the shaft rests upon the pedestal there is a projection of stone upon each corner and on each projection is carved the head of the American lion. These heads are by Paul W. Bartlett, of Paris, France.

The second astragal will be 12 feet and 6 inches above the first, and will represent the navy at the period of the civil war. Its perpendicular height will be 10 feet. At each of the four corners there will be projections making special illustration of the navy by the bows of an American war vessel. These projections will measure about 7 feet from the shaft to the bows of the vessel, and the bowsprits will extend some 3 feet further. The astragal will be modeled from the Hartford, Admiral Farragut's flag ship. Upon the east and west sides of the astragal a monitor and a western gunboat, respectively, will be shown. The design will be that of George T. Brewster, of Cleveland, Ohio. The astragal is being cast by Bureau Brothers, of Philadelphia.

The upper astragal is 80 feet above the location of the second and 10 feet and 6 inches below the lower line of the capital. This astragal shows upon its four sides the dates of the wars in which soldiers of the State of Indiana took part. It is also by George T. Brewster, of Cleveland. The casting was done by the American Bronze Company, of Chicago.

The corps badges of the Army of the United States are carved upon the stone astragal of the main pedestal, flanking the doorways in the pedestal, as are also the badges representing the several branches of the service, including the Navy. The badge of the Twenty-first Corps, if any exists, has not been secured, but space has been reserved for it so that it may be carved at some future time. Upon the keystones of the pediments above the tablets are carved heads, designed by George T.

Brewster, of Cleveland, O. On the east and west sides of the main pedestal of the monument, and 20 feet above the terrace, are two platforms about 21 feet by 10 feet in size, forming sub-pedestals, and upon them will be placed bronze groups representing respective ly "War" and "Peace."

The weight of the shaft, outer mantel, appendices and foundations, is about 8,850 tons. The foundations are carefully constructed of large dimension stone to a height of 18 feet, started upon a bed of concrete two feet thick composed of broken stone and Portland cement. The load upon the foundation is about 3 tons to the square foot. There has practically been no settlement since the foundation was put in.

On the south approach to the State Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument stands a bronze statue of the famous War Governor of Indiana, Oliver P. Morton, who was the first to suggest the construction of the Soldiers' STATUE. It was erected in 1884 under the direction of a committee of citizens, of which Governor Conrad Baker was Chairman, with a fund raised by popular subscription. The designer was Franklin Simmons, of Rome, Italy, and it was cast there. The statue is eight feet and ten inches high, and rests upon an eight foot pedestal of Maine granite.

The statue of the late Vice-President Schuyler Colfax is in the southwestern quarter of University square. It was erected in 1887 COLFAX by the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Daughters of Rebekah. STATUE. The designer was Lorado Taft, of Chicago.

A statue of the late Vice-President Thomas A. Hendricks, stands in the southeastern corner of the capitol grounds. It was erected by popular subscription, and unveiled in July, 1890. The statue itself is HENDRICKS' fourteen feet six inches high, and the monument as a whole has STATUE. a height of thirty-eight feet six inches. The statue is of bronze; the pedestal is of Bavano granite from the quarries at Lake Maggiore, Italy. Two allegorical statues representing "History" and "Peace" stand upon the base of the monument to its right and left. The monument was designed by R. H. Parks, of Florence, Italy.

The United States Arsenal grounds comprise seventy-six acres, extending from Michigan street to Clifford avenue at the eastern limit of the city. The entrance gate is on Michigan street at the head of Arsenal avenue. The present government institution was laid out in 1863 and finished in 1868. The seven buildings of the Arsenal are of brick and stone. ARSENAL. The most important are the main storehouse, the artillery storehouse and the barracks. There are also residences for the officers stationed there.

The establishment of this arsenal was, no doubt, suggested to the government by the course taken by Governor Morton during the rebellion. Governor Morton was a man of boundless energy, and, anticipating the demands of war, he established a State arsenal at Indianapolis within two weeks after Fort Sumter had been fired upon. Guns with which to arm the Indiana troops had been bought, but ammunition was more difficult to get. As regiment after regiment marched to the front the demand increased and ammunition for field pieces and small arms was manufactured in large quantities. At one time six hundred men were employed in the arsenal. Not only Indiana troops were supplied, but other portions of our western armies as well, including the forces of Generals Sherman, Anderson, Fremont and Buell. Threatened disaster was repeatedly averted by the prompt filling of orders for ammunition when the troops of other States were in need. It is difficult to estimate the importance of this Indiana arsenal in the military operations in the West. It was discontinued in 1863.

In Crown Hill Cemetery, covering four hundred acres of ground, three and one-half miles northwest of the city, is the national cemetery in which are buried the union soldiers who died in Indianapolis and also CROWN those whose bodies were brought here for interment. There, among HILL the soldiers, for whose welfare he worked so tirelessly, lies the body CEMETERY. of Governor Morton. No more beautiful cemetery can be found in the country than Crown Hill.

Other cemeteries are the Roman Catholic, Greenlawn, German Lutheran, Jewish and Lutheran.

Military Park lies between New York street and the Indiana Central Canal on the north and south, and West and Blackford streets on the east and west, and includes fourteen acres. In the early days of the city's history it was known as the MILITARY PARK. "Military Reservation," and was the place where militia musters were held. All the military companies of the city during the pioneer days camped and drilled there, and at the time of the Blackhawk outbreak three hundred Indiana militia camped there before marching to Chicago. It was also the first camping ground of Indiana's quota of six regiments under President Lincoln's first call for troops, and throughout the war it was used as a camp ground. The park was then known as Camp Sullivan. Many of the old forest trees still stand, with some hundreds of younger growth. A large fountain is situated in the center of the park at the meeting place of the converging pathways.

UNIVERSITY SQUARE.

University Square comprises four acres, lying between Pennsylvania and Meridian streets on the east and west and Vermont and New York streets on the north and south. It was the site of a university that flourished from 1834 to 1846, and thus acquired its name. A statue of Schuyler Colfax stands in the southwestern side.

Blind Institute Park adjoins the grounds of the Institution for the Blind on the north, from Meridian to Pennsylvania streets, extending to St. Clair street. It is four acres in extent, and in its center there is a fountain.

Garfield Park is the largest park within the limits of the city. It lies to the extreme south, and covers one hundred and ten acres. It is the most pleasing bit of landscape in the immediate neighborhood of Indianapolis. The principal driveway is over what was once one of the best known race tracks in the country. A small stream winds through the park.

Fairview Park, seven miles northeast of the city, is a beautiful expanse of about two hundred acres of wooded hills and ravines overlooking White River and the Indiana Central Canal. It is reached by two lines of electric cars running at intervals of ten minutes, and is a favorite outing place on summer evenings. A restaurant is located there, with bowling alleys, boat livery and various other means of amusement. Concerts are given in the park several times a week during the summer months.

The Y. M. C. A. Athletic Park extends from Ohio street north to Michigan street between Arsenal avenue and Hanna street. In the park are laid out ball grounds, tennis courts, and a half-mile track. An amphitheater stands in the southwest corner.

Woodruff Place, nominally a town, but really a park, lies within the limits of the city, yet is not a part of it. It adjoins the Arsenal grounds on the east, and stretches from Michigan street to Clifford avenue. It is a most beautiful residence park. Many fountains and pieces of statuary are in it.

The State Fair Grounds embrace a tract of one hundred and sixty acres, three miles northeast of the city.

Armstrong Park is two miles northwest of the city, upon the bank of the canal. It is beautifully wooded, and a favorite boating resort.

Their connections abroad enable them to place upon their counters many novelties in Writing Papers which are not to be found elsewhere, while in American manufacture their line of Pure Linen Papers and Fine Writing Papers have gained so wide a reputation for excellence as scarcely to require any further endorsement. The stock for this paper is very carefully selected and unusually clean and free from specks. The surface is uniform, and is so treated that either fine or coarse pens glide over it easily and without friction.

THE BOWEN-MERRILL Co. furnish Original Designs for Monograms, Crests, Coats-of-Arms, etc., and their customers may depend upon having their Visiting Cards, Wedding and Reception Invitations engraved and printed in the correct style, promptly and economically.

Attention is directed to the fact that THE BOWEN-MERRILL Co. transact a large business in Stationery through the mails, and dealers living at a distance from Indianapolis can depend upon having the same care exercised in filling their orders for Engraving and Paper as though the selections were made in person.

LAW BOOKS.

Vermont Hotel,

51st St. and Cottage Grove Ave.

THE VERMONT HOTEL is one of Chicago's finest hotels. It is a fire-proof structure, containing 300 rooms, comprising every modern convenience, and finished throughout in hard-wood; many of the rooms are provided with private toilet and bath rooms, fitted up in luxurious style. All rooms are heated by steam, lighted by gas and electricity, with gas logs in all suites. It contains two passenger elevators. The public and private dining-rooms are beautifully situated on the top, or eighth, floor of the building, from the windows and balconies of which a magnificent view of the city can be had, including the Boulevards, Washington Park, World's Fair Grounds, and Lake Michigan.

The Vermont is so constructed that all are outside rooms; there is no other building fronting on the block, therefore its guests are assured of cool and pleasant quarters during the heated term.

The location of the hotel is at the entrance of Fifty-first street Boulevard, Drexel Boulevard, and main entrance of Washington Park (the grandest of Chicago's boulevards and the handsomest park in the city), surrounded by the most beautiful flower gardens that the art of the florist is able to produce. The FINEST RESIDENCES in the city are on THESE BOULEVARDS. It is in walking distance of the Exposition, and but half a block to Cottage Grove avenue cable cars, and five minutes' walk to the Fifty-first street station of the elevated road (both lines running direct to the Fair Grounds and the business center). This makes the VERMONT pre-eminently one of the most delightful locations for World's Fair visitors.

Carriages and busses will be in waiting to convey guests to the Fair Grounds, the route being through Washington Park or over the boulevards. Special inducements to permanent guests.

The location and surroundings of the Vermont make it a most inviting Summer Resort. A personal inspection is invited. American and European plan. Rates from $1.00 to $5.00 per day. Write or telegraph.

THE BOWEN-MERRILL CO.,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

SILAS T. BOWEN.

employs a force of nearly one hundred people; its jobbing trade is carried into all of the Middle and Southern States, and as far west as Oklahoma, Nebraska, and Indian Territory, while its own publications are in demand in every State in the Union. It is also publisher for Richard Malcolm Johnston, the popular short story writer of the South; Meredith Nicholson, the rising young poet, of the staff of The Indianapolis News, and Mrs. Sarah T. Bolton, mother of the poetic spirit of Indiana.

From a small beginning in 1888, the present house, founded by Samuel Merrill, Sr., Ex-Treasurer of State, has built up a trade which equals the entire business in its line in Indiana. Now fourteen traveling men sell its goods from the Atlantic to the Rocky Mountains.

The present house was incorporated January 1, 1885, when the two well-known and reputable firms of Bowen, Stewart & Co. and Merrill, Meigs & Co. were consolidated, with Silas T. Bowen as President, and Samuel Merrill, Superintendent.

The business is divided into four departments—Law Publishing, Miscellaneous Publishers, and Wholesale and Retail Dealers in Books, Stationery and Druggist's Sundries, and Paper, now under the following management: William H. Elvin, Pres't; William C. Bobbs, Sec'y; Charles W. Merrill, Treas.; and John J. Curtis, Sup't.

The history of this house, which is the only one of the kind in the State, has been prosperity and progress, and its record has been one to which the city points with pride. Such concerns have made Indianapolis today the peer of all other inland cities in America.

The rapid strides made by Indianapolis during the past year has forced some of the conservative firms to exert themselves to keep up with the pace. The house of "The Bowen-Merrill Co." has not only kept abreast of the times with the foremost mercantile establishments, but in fact has made advances that have placed it in the lead of all houses of its class in the inland cities in the United States.

In Law Books, it has a large list of publications, including standard works by the best known legal authors. It has established a business in this line, embracing Reports, Digests, Statutes and Legal Text-Books, which extends into every part of the country, and ranks with the largest law book houses in America.

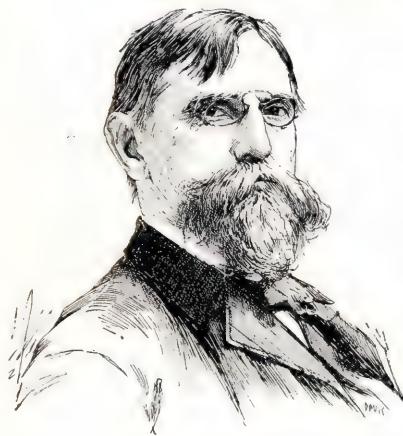

The Bowen-Merrill Co. is the publisher of James Whitcomb Riley, and its retail department is stocked with all the latest literature from the leading publishers of the world. This company, in its several forms, has been in existence for over fifty years. It

THE BOWEN-MERRILL CO. ANNOUNCE

A New Book by the Author of "Ben-Hur."

The Prince of India

GENERAL LEW WALLACE.

Author of "The Prince of India," "Ben-Hur," etc.

In response to many inquiries received from various sources regarding a new work by the author of "Ben-Hur," we take pleasure in giving the following facts concerning the book: Like General Wallace's preceding works, "The Prince of India; or, Why Constantinople Fell," is an historical romance. The story begins in 1395; its continuous movement, however, is in the period from 1445 to 1453, the date of the conquest of the old Byzantine capital by Mohammed II. The assault and sack of the city, and Mohammed's entry into Sancta Sophia (the final degradation of Christianity in the East) forms the catastrophe of the book.

Speaking generally, the book is a tale of love, war and religion. The unities are faithfully observed, and the incidents natural, rapid in occurrence, astonishingly varied, and from first to last subservient to the catastrophe. There is not an anachronism in it, and so true are the scenes to the period, that they read as if left to us by a living actor in them.

While Minister to Turkey, General Wallace was afforded exceptional opportunities for the collection of those materials which he has woven into romance, and in "The Prince of India," the result appears in all the realism of a style which gave to "Ben-Hur" a popularity that indicates for the new book an immediate and large demand.

Price, 2 vols., 16mo, cloth, $2.50. Postpaid on receipt of price.
